

PRESENTER

Dr. Patricia Craven is the founder and Clinical Director of Healing Transitions: Creative Counseling for Children & Families, Inc. in Tallahassee Florida. Her office has several equipped playrooms and is considered a training facility for future play therapists where she supervises therapists towards licensure and RPT designation. The majority of her clientele are children in foster care. She works with families towards reunification after their children have been removed and placed in foster care. She has developed a preventive intervention to promote resiliency in first placement foster children titled "Transitional Therapy."

Dr. Craven has presented workshops at local, state and national conferences regarding a variety of subjects including, play therapy, reactive attachment disorder, healing rituals, Transitional Therapy, and early brain development crucial to foster children. She has publications regarding foster care and has recently been published in a chapter in "Readings in Evidence-Based Social Work." She is also trained in EMDR, family mediation, and is a certified parenting coordinator.
